Why is it important to read?

There are many benefits to reading books. Books relax, expand knowledge, shape character, develop empathy, enrich vocabulary and improve communication skills.

And above all, they give a sense of time well spent and pleasantly spent.

There are some books that you simply have to read.
Although the list of novels that are worth reaching for is much longer,
I present the 10 most interesting titles.
Here are the books that should not be missed !

One Hundred Years of Solitude

Gabriel Garcia Marquez

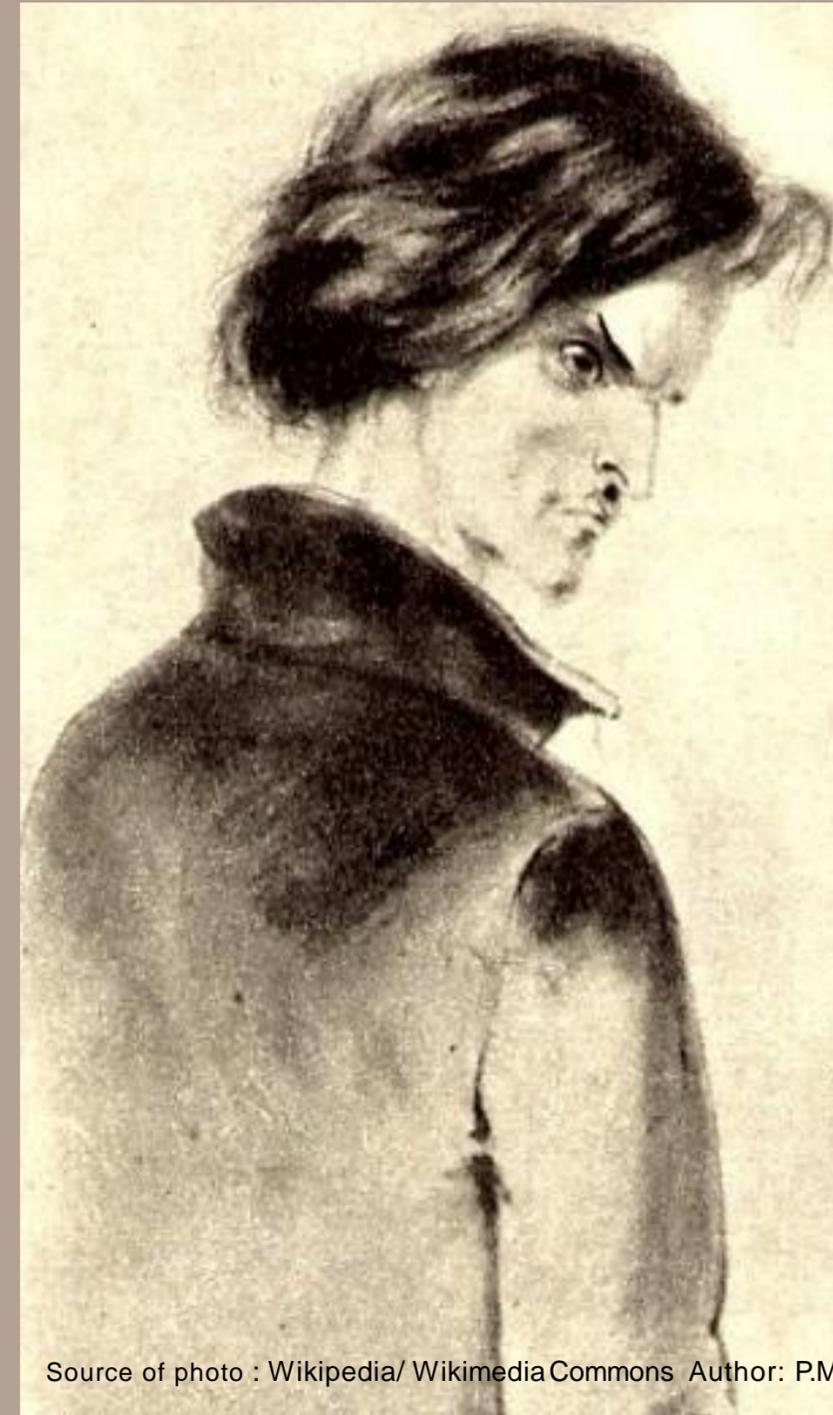

"One Hundred Years of Solitude" is a magical book, in which extraordinary things have a dimension of gray everyday life, while ordinariness is taken as a supernatural phenomenon.

It is a novel both about specific social and historical circumstances and about love and sadness, alienation and loneliness.

Crime and Punishment

Fiodor Dostojewski

„Crime and Punishment" is undoubtedly the most outstanding literary study of the psyche of a criminal. Dostoevsky insightfully depicts the motives of the crime committed, as well as the inner struggle of the perpetrator with the remorse tormenting him.

For Whom the Bell Tolls

Ernest Hemingway

In it, the author has defined wonderful psychological portraits.

He depicted the human dimension of the ongoing battle, human weaknesses and breakdowns.

The artistic value of this novel is determined primarily by the strength of the battle descriptions, and above all by the poignant emotional subtlety and nobility of the story of a tragically ended feeling.

The Trial

Franz Kafka

One of the most important novels of the 20th century. "The Trial" is a surreal story about Joseph K., who one day is arrested and dragged into a bureaucratic and heartless machine.

The protagonist does not know, neither what he did, nor who really arrested him - no one wants to answer his questions.

The Master and Margarita

Michaił Bułhakow

A classic of Russian and world literature that invariably inspires and fascinates.

"The Master and Margarita" is a masterpiece, but one that does not bore at all. It is a novel that draws you in, entertains you, teaches you, delights. you.

Wuthering Heights

Emily Brontë

"Wuthering Heights" is a novel about demonic, destructive and toxic love. The story of the crazy feeling that brought Cathy and Heathcliff together.

It is an excellent novel that simultaneously fascinates, draws you in and inspires horror with its intensity.

1984

George Orwell

The vision of the world that Orwell presents is much deeper than the mere voyeurism of its citizens by the watchful eye of the leader.

In "1984" the individual does not exist and privacy is only in the realm of dreams.

To Kill a Mockingbird

Harper Lee

"To Kill a Mockingbird" is a novel about racism in the 1930s in the United States, but it is readable and relevant in any other era and anywhere in the world. It is a beautiful book about otherness, tolerance and understanding, but also a wise coming-of-age story.

The Picture of Dorian Gray

Oscar Wilde

It is impossible to tear yourself away from Oscar Wilde's novel. It's a story about morality, the pursuit of youth and innocence, and being yourself in a world that doesn't quite allow it. "The Picture of Dorian Gray" is a book that for years has warned the reader against a mindless escape into evil and lies.

The Count of Monte Cristo

Aleksander Dumas

Dumas's brilliant work is still an unsurpassed prototype of a tale of great intrigue, the power of revenge, the might of friendship and the triumph of man in the struggle for honor.
